

Glossary

Customer journey

The sequence of actions and decisions that your customer travels through, from beginning to end, to solve a specific problem in their life.

Empathy

To learn what matters to your customers and deeply feel their pain.

Hypothesis

An unproven prediction about how the world will work, frequently focused on potential customer behavior, that can be proven right or wrong after sufficient testing.

Product manager

A professional role responsible for defining the product strategy, including what problem the product will solve and for what customer, and then building and delivering a great customer experience.

Problem space

A confined set of ideas focused only on what problems a customer faces, without discussing solutions.

Solution space

A set of ideas focused on delivering solutions to problems defined in the problem space.

User interview

Talking to a customer or potential customer to ask questions that help you understand their problems, their customer journey, and their characteristics, goals, and motivations.

User personas

Cohorts of customers that share characteristics, motivations, and goals. Personas help you understand how different types of customers will interact with your product.
